

Chapter 12 Summary - What, When, Where, Who, Why, How

Chapter 12 was about the War of 1812 and the subsequent rise of nationalism among Americans in the United States. (What, When, Where, Who) There was a rise of nationalism after the War of 1812 because while the war ended with an armistice and territories did not change ownership (Treaty of Ghent,) they United States gained respect from foreign countries because Americans were able to hold their ground. (Why) The rise of nationalism was seen through the emergence of American literature, American history, the American System (tariff and Bank of the United States,) an increase of the American military to 10,000 troops, and the Monroe Doctrine which warned European countries not to get involved in the Western Hemisphere. Nevertheless the time after the War of 1812 was also characterized by the economic problems like the Panic of 1819 and political problems like the rise of sectionalism over slavery. (How)
